CRIMINAL MATTERS.

CONFIDENCE ROBBERS WORK
THE PADLOCK GAME,

and Rope in a Chicago Tenderfoot A Studhorse Poker Game Raided Successfally by the Police—A Bold A Studbe

Confidence men are still at work in this city. On last Thursday afternoon a green-looking youth from Chicago, who has been working at Santa Anita, was standing on the corner of First and Spring on the corner of First and Spring streets looking into vacancy, when a spruce-looking chap stepped up to him and invited him to take a walk, as he was very anxious to show the Chicago youth the fines orange grove in the State. The greenhorn took the bait, and in a few minutes they were on the ontskirts of Mesmer's orchard, on the corner of San Pedro and Second streets. The sharper kicked a common padlock out of the dust and picked it up.

"I used to know how to open these things without a key," said the spider. The poor little fly had never heard of such a thing and became interested. The spider opened it without any trouble, and locked it again. "Now, I'll bet you can't open it," said he, handing it to the fly. "I'll bet you the drinks you can't." The fly went to work and had not had time to give it a test when another stranger, who was dressed quite shabily, stepped up and wanted to know what they were doing. The spider explained matters and the stranger offered to bet either of them that the greenhorn from Chicago could not open it in thirty seconds. The youth planked down his money and lost, of course. He thought nothing more of the matter until he noticed the two men walking arm in arm together. He walked across the street and accused the one who wanted him to go to the orchard with him of being a swindler. The men cursed him and walked off. The young man looked up Officer Fred Smith, and the two started out to find the men. They saw them going into the New Market restaurant yesterday morning and waited until they came out, when the young man stepped up and accused them of having robbed him. They were at once taken in charge by Smith, who marched them down to the police station. When they were searched an old, well-worn purse was found on each man, and they both contained $0 bills of the Confederate States. The fellows will have a hearing before Justice Austin toniorrow morning. They gave their names as John Minger and E. Courtright. "I used to know how to open these things

YANKED IN.

The Chief and Smith Raid a Gambling Game.
Chief Skinner, Fred Smith and Officer

Moore made a raid on a gambling den, at North Main street, last night at 11 o'clock. The place was opened three days ago by a gambler named Hall, who came here about five weeks ago from Arizona. He sent out his earls a week ago, and called his place "Hall's Private Library." He fitted up two rooms in fine style. There were only eight men in the rooms when Smith, who had captured the pass-word, entered. He stood and watched the game—"studbors poker"— faw minutes and entered. He stood and watched the game—
"studhorse poker"—a few minutes, and placed the whole crowd of sports under arrest. They made an attempt to get away, but the Chief and Moore were standing at the entrance and the boy-hoys had to submit. They were booked at the police station as follows: L. Levi, John Williams, H. St.
Clair, Fred Wilson, John Salman, F. Willlams and M. W. Collman. Of course they did not give their right names, and the chances are that they will not appear for trial. Their bail was fixed at $50 for Levi, the dealer, and $10 each for the players.
The other houses happened to be closed, or there would have been a better hanl, for the Chief had a number of officers detailed on gambling last night.

went to bed together. The landlord noticed that the Mexican left the room alone, and thinking something was wrong, he went up to West's room, and asked him if he new that his partner had gone. On examining his clothes, West found that he had been robbed of $35 in coin and a gold watch and chain. He placed the case in the hands of Detective Lucas yesterday. The Mexican told him that he lived at San Pedro. went to bed together. The landlord notice

A NEW DEAL.

Corporated.
The Los Angeles Real-estate Exchange an institution which will fill a long-felt and oft-noted want—was organized last night by a number of the prominent and reliable real-estate firms of the city. The articles of in-corporation have been drawn up and signed, and will be filed with the County Clerk tomorrow morning. The object of the Exchange, as set forth in the articles, is to change, as set forth in the articles, is to afford better facilities for the sale and exchange of properties, to establish uniform rates of brokerage and commission, to disseminate reliable information about real estate in Los Angeles county, and to prescribe rules and regulations for the management of real-estate business for the members. There is no capital stock. The initiation fee is $50.

The following firms are the "charter members": T. E. Rowan. Brodtbeck & Penney, Lindley Bros. Oliver, Walker & Goodenow, Dobinson & Fairchild, Pomeroy & Gates, Humphreys & Riggin, H. H. Wilcox, F. H. Barclay, Gilbert & Estudillo.
Following are the officers: President, T. E. Rowan; secretary, W. Gilbert; treasurer, A. E. Pomeroy; directors, the above and G. A. Dobinson, O. Brodtbeck, J. W. Walker and Hervey Lindley.

Oh, Yes, Very Healthy.

Albert K. Owen and his co-promoters are just now advertising that the sickness among the Topolobampo colonists is wiped out, and that the colony is healthful as can be. A private letter received here, however, from one of the colonists, states that a colonist named Ross has just died of the smallpox, at Libertad, a camp forty miles from the bay, whither he had gone to escape the sickness at the bay.

Suicide by Shooting.

John Klein, aged about 35 years, a freightrustler at Riverside, committed suicide at that place night before last. Agent Davenport found him dead in the freight-house yesterday morning, with a revolver in his hand and a bullet-hole through his head.

WILLIAM KISSANE,

Alias William K. Rogers—Further Pointers About Him. There are a number of gentlemen in this city who were well acquainted with Will-iam Kissane during his career in Cincinnat. O., some thirty years ago. Capt. A. M. Thornton was seen by a Times reporter last night, and said:

night, and said:

"Yes: I read about Bill Kissane in The Times this morning, and I remember the case very well, although I was quite a young man then. On reading of his doings in your dispatches this morning the whole thing becomes fresh in my mind once more.
I have known for a number of years that Kissane was living in Sonoma county under an assumed name, but I never knew what name he was going under. When he got into trouble in Cinclinnath, he and a company were running a large pork-packing factory on the nortwest corner of Race and Canal street. He appeared to be in a flourishing condition, when suddenly the news came that he and his partners had burned the Martha Washington and murdered a number of people. He and a number of people were arrested. The others were nequitied, but Kissane was convicted and sentenced to State's prison on his way to the prison, he or his partners bribed the officers and he was allowed to escape from the train. It was believed for a long time that he had been killed in some foreign country. But the papers discovered some years ago that he was living in this State. I was in a wagon factory in San Francisco a few years ago, and an old Cincinnati man who owned the place, said: "Those wagons are being made for Bill Kissane. He is living in Sonoma county and is one of the weaithiest men in the State. You would know him if you "Yes: I read about Bill Kissane in THE Bill Kissane. He is living to county and is one of the wealthlest men in the State. You would know him if you should see him, for he looks as he did when in Cincinnati.' He would not give me the name, but I know that any one who ever him again. He is a in Cincinnati. He would not give me and name, but I know that any one who ever saw him would know thim again. He is a very tall man of a decided blonde type, and always dresses well."

Kissane is known in Sonoma as William

BAD ACCIDENT.

A Leg Mashed and Broken by the

About 11 o'clock last evening a telephone received at the police stat was received at the police station saying that a man had been run over at the freight depot, and asking that a doctor be sent at once. When a Times reporter arrived at the place of the accident a man was found lying near the track covered with a blanket. How badly he was hurt no one seemed to know. It was evident that his leg was jamm d and broken near the ankle, though the heavy boots he wore concealed the extent of the injury. He name was given as Patrick Knox, a railroad employé. He was in a semi-stupor, partly from the effects of drink and partly from the effects of drink and partly from the heavy from the effects of drink and partly from the effects of drink and partly from the effects of drink and partly from pain. A party where he boarded said that he had been on a spree for nearly a week. It is supposed that he was trying to climb over or between the cars, when the engine ran up against them and he was caught between the bumpers. Engine 199, driven by W. H. Fair, was on duty in the yard, but the engineer knew nothing of the accident, till the engine fireman, C. F. Sanborn, pulled the man out from under the cars. A doctor was expected every moment, but up to 1 o'clock one had not appeared to care for the man, and no one seemed to want to cut off his boot and see how badly he was injured. know. It was evident that his leg was

CRIMINAL CONCEALMENT.

A Doctor's Dangerous Work—A Small-pox Nest.

There was great excitement in the neighbood of the Morris Vineyard tract last night about 10 o'clock Officers Reed and Arguelle and four health office rade on a smallpox den on Pine street. It seems that the disease made its appearance in the family some time ago, and the attend-ing physician has kept the matter a profound secret. Yesterday evening A Bold Robbery.

A bold robbery took place in a lodging house, on Los Angeles street, early yesterday morning. C. W. West, a farm laborer, and a Mexican, whom he had pleked up, the the lith officers accompanied by the leath officers. Secompanied by the leath officers, accompanied by the leath officers. above-mentioned police officers, made their way to the house about 10 o'clock last night. The family made a hard fight, and the officers had to knock the door down before they could get in. They took the woman and boy to the smallpox hospital.

Out of Whole Cloth.
Officer Collins states that the story published in yesterday's Express—to that he had been rude to some h of whole cloth. No such thing took place. His duty on the Spring-street beat is to keep people from obstructing the sidewalks, and he does it as courteously as possible. Some neople will stand and talk an hour at a point on the sidewalk where they hinder the passage of hundreds; and then if a policeman never so politely asks them to step aside they get mad. An Express reporter of dubious repute tried to buildoze Chief Skinner last night into discharging Collins, but didn't make much headway. Collins has done well on the force thus far.

A Family Row.

A family fight took place last night about 7 o'clock, on the corner of Seventh and Main streets. A Mexican and ayoung hoodlum started the circus, and before time was called on the first round, there were about a dozen men, women and children in the middle of the street, and fire and blood made the air dim. No bones were broken, and the combatants scattered like so many sheep. No arrests were made.

A Good Suggestion.

Mrs. Margaret E. Parker suggests that a suitable way of commemorating the jubilee of Queen Victoria would be for Los Angeles to send for one thousand girls from England and pay their expenses to Los Angeles, to come as helps. The Woman's Club has appointed a committee of three to confer with the jubilee committee.

Over a Million and a Half Dollars Worth of Real Estate Changes Hands in Six Days-List of Prin-

The week which ended last night was a very active one in real-estate circles. As noted exclusively in yesterday's Times, the transfers for March were the largest ever known here in one month, amounting to nearly five and a half million dollars. April starts off with a promise to equal if not surpass this startling record. The Azusa craze has already been noted in these columns; and a less sensational, but almost equally vigorous boom has been "on all around." Following is the classified summary of transfers, and list of principal sales:

leads from the office to the second floor. The pariors are on either side of the main hall on the second floor. The ladies' occupies the front and the gentlemen's the rear of the beliding. Both are richly and handsomely furnished with furniture of the most modern and elegant styles. The chambers correspond with everything else in their luxurious and convenient appointments. All can be warmed, and many have coay open fireplaces.

"No part of a good hotel can be made more attractive than the dining-room. In this particular the Carleton has no superior anywhere. It is 40x80 feet, finished in redwood and attractively decorated. The entire furniture is antique eak and the chairs are upholstered in leather. Occupying a large space midway of the room is an old-fashioned stone fireplace, from which a bright fire obserfully glows every cool morning to remind the guests of their home firesides. In selecting his silver for the Carleton, Mr. Root has introduced some novelties not to be found in anyhotel on this continent. At every evening meal the tables are ornamented with handsome silver candelabra.

"The service of the Carleton is preëminently metropolitan. The cook, baker and waiters are all from New York city. The lessee and manager of the Carleton is E. W. Root, late of the Grand Central Hotel. New York city, a gentleman whose high reputation places him in the most front ranks of the hotel men of this country. When the house opened the firm was Root & Smith, but Mr. Smith has retired to assume charge of the new steam laundry. One secret of Mr. Root's notable success is the personnal attention he gives to all departments of his house. He employs no steward, but does all of his own catering. He buys only the best of everything, and as a result the table of the Carleton is superior in every particular."

THE SAUNTERER.

THE SAUNTERER.

Did you ever find yourself inside of a store on the day of a "special sale?" If you never have you don't know all about human nature yet. You are not aware of all the tricks that a certain class of women will resort to, to make sure of a good bargain. Of course, there are women and there are women. There are those who are ladles under all circumstances. There are those who let their angry passions rise, and who don't care a continental then whether they are ladles or not.

Well, I saw a crowd going into Hale's the other morning, so I thought I would take a peep inside. It is my business, you know, to go where the crowd goes. There was a "special sale," I found. Good kid gloves going at fifty cents a pair, and lace buntings for a song. Just the time for me to learn something more of human nature myself, but then there are variations. There was an immense crowd at the countersmen and women mixed as they are at a circus. There were some ladles there and some who were of the same sex, but who were not ladies. How these last did snatch and pull and hold on to what they wanted to purchase in a way that was intended to prevent others from supplanting them. Among this throng I noticed a lady who held herself above such methods. She said to the busy clerk near her:

"Will you kindly wait on me when you are through with your present customer?"

"Yes, madam. What goods do you wish?" he inquired.

"Will, you please to hold the piece until I am ready to wait upon you, then?" he realied.

And she got it.

"Aren't you going to make any purchases?" inquired another lady of a young lady standing by.

"No, I would rather never have a new dress than to snatch and push as I would have to in this crowd in order to get it." she answered, with a look of disgust. "How awful mean women are to one another, aren't they, sometimes?" she added as she turned to go.

Just then another well-dressed woman seized upon a piece of goods. It followed her across the counter as if she had been a magnet. "Here, cut me off twenty yards of this. I've been waiting here all the morning, and folks all crowding in before me so that I haven't bought anything yet. I may as well take my turn at crowding now, and perhaps I'll get waited on." And she thrust her elbow into the side of a lady who stood near her so sharply that she was glad to stand one side and let her have full sweep. And so the sale went on, and I could but conclude as I looked and listened that, as I said before, there are ladies and there are ladies, and if you want to find them go to a "special sale."

the two were trying to see how small a hole they could crawl through. One attenuated little chap went through all right. He was thin enough to creep through an ordinary knot-hole, but the other struggled like a cockroach lying on its back and trying to find its legs. The small boy looked as if he might be all feet, as he pushed, and writhed, and struggled to worm his way out. But he thought it was the grandest fun in spite of difficulties. I think he belonged to the class who value any object according to the difficulty in obtaining it. He did not look remarkably cheerful; as I could see, when, without difficulty, his head was thrust through the opening, but then when body and shoulders got fast he was simply hilarious. He had the spirit of Alexander, glad so long as there were worlds to conquer. He got through at last. But the fun was all on his side. His mother would not share it if she had the rents in his jacket and trousers to repair.

I saw a bit of squirrel coquetry the other day, and it was amusing. I was out on the hills. I was tired and so I sat down, idly looking about me. It was not long before I saw a blithe young squirrel peeping out of her hole. Then, at a little distance up popped a gray-whiskered old fellow who fell to eying the gay young thing.c She returned his glances, turning her head first to one side and then the other. Then she dropped partly out of sight, then up again with a graceful spring, uttering a faint little sound. Then, with a swift sweep, she ran out to the shelter of a bush, and from behind this she peered at her sleek admirer. He came nearer, and she changed her front. Still he sought her in her new position, and she skipped to another bush. But the festive old fellow was not to be eluded. From bush to bush he followed as she led, till at latt she stole up quietly beside him, and, nibbling at something, there they sat together, probably as Mistress Squirrel had desired to sit from the first. I concluded that squirrels have the same theory as that entertained by some bipeds: "What is easily won is never much prized." looking about me. It was not long before

Theosophic Philosophy.

In other columns of THE TIMES will be found a lengthy discursive article upon Theosophy, in which the writer endeavors to prove that it is a system above all others which opens the way to a full and clear understanding of and acquaintance with, not only all occult philosophy and esoteric truth but with their divine source. Theosophy is characterized as a system which permits its faithful followers 'to walk in subtler spheres" than those which ordinary mortals tread! and to reach sublimer heights of knowledge and of virtue.

Theosophy, as we understand it, is a so-called sacred science, which professes to exclude all the dialectical process of philosophy and theology, and to derive its knowledge of God from direct and immediate intuition and contemplation, or from the immediate communications of God himself. Theosophy therefore, as far as regards the science of divine knowledge, is but another name for Mysticism, and a refinement of Buddhistic teaching. While Theoso phy and Christianity have many moral principles and wise teachings in common, as a whole they are antagonistic. They are built each upon a differen Theosophy refuses to accept the doctrines and the teachings of the Bible as inspired truth, and adopts in place thereof a philosophy of its own. It is merely a human invention, and therefore but another form of skepti-Skepticism naturally brings superstition as its complement No individual and no people can long endure the emptiness of total unbelief. It is as impossible for the christianity of the Bible lead to humanly conceived systems of so-called religious faith. It was this tendency that gave to the ancient Egyptian his Osiris, Serapis and Isis; to the Greek and Roman their Jupiter, and Neptune and Vulcan; to the Chaldean and Per-sian their Mistra, Oromasdes and Arimon; to the Hindoo his Brahma, Vishnu and Siva, and to the Chinese and other nations of eastern Asia their and other nations of eastern Asia their god, Buddha. But none of these systems were sufficient for the world; none of them but leave the imprint of human fallibility. The sacred books of all religions other than Christianity are full of errors. As Hitchcock, in his "Highest Use of Learning," says: "The Shasters of the Hindoos contain false astronomy, as well as false anatomy and physiology; and the Koran of Mohammed distinctly avows the Ptolemaic system of the heavenly bodies; and so interwoven are these scientific errors with the religion of these sacred books, that when you have proved the former you have disproved the latter. But the Bible, stating only facts, and adopting no system human philosophy, has ever stood, and ever shall stand in sublime simplicity and undecaying strength; while the winds and the waves of conflicting human opinions roar and dash harm lessly around, and the wrecks of thousand false systems of philosopy and religion are strewed along its base."

The claim of the theosophic essayist that Theosophy is "destined to become the practical and universal enlightenment of the mind which Buddha and Christ were so eager to infuse into their sustained. Theosophy is too visionary in its principles to answer such ends. What teachings that are not simply grafts from older systems that, save the system of Bible truth, have long since since proved ineffectual for spiritual enlightenment? Theosophy is but a dead body galvanized until it has the semblance of life without any of its vitalizing forces. Our young theos-ophist also makes this untenable assertion in regard to this system of Mme. Blavatsky's: "It has one quality more than any religion, in that it makes no difference between Gentile. Jew and Christian." Neither does the religion of the Gospel. What wider scope or broader principle of love could be embodied in human effort than that embraced in the command to the early apostles of Christianity: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." This religion of the Bible is co-extensive with human needs. and requires not to be supplemented by human inventions.

Again the writer says: "Rather than producing miracles, Theosophy proves that a miracle, or the breaking of the laws of nature, has never taken place, is unthinkable, since a breaking of a universal law would result in chaos.' And now let us inquire what is law. as applied to nature? And what are these laws of nature of which skeptics prate so much-what but the exercise of will force of the Divine Will in certain directions? The Omnipresen is everywhere, at each point of space. filling immensity with His Presence. Every intelligent Christian believes that He momentarily stands in the immediate and active connection with every particle of matter in the universe. great universe which He has created is not a self-acting machine, but it is subject to laws that have their field of operation among the "hidings of God's power." As says Prof. Hopkins:

at present in regard to miracles, and men seem to fall into difficulties about them of their own making. Did you ever see a man riding in his own dust? In countries where they have no rain for months and the wind blows steadily in one direction, a man may ride thus all day with everything obscured around and above him, while to one who stands apart the atmosphere is wonderfully transparent. We have speculative men much in that condition. On many points, and this of miracles is one, they raise a fog about their own heads and suppose it extends through the universe. They talk about miracles as a violation of the laws of nature, and is slimply an act performed directly by the will of God that transcends those laws. That the will of God should cause iron to rise and swim in the water, is no more a violation of the law of gravitation than it is for me to raise this rod, which goes up directly or indirectly by the superior force of will acting at some point immediately upon matter. The law of gravitation continues to act, but the rod rises by a spiritual force that transcends it, that force acting freely, intelligently and with dominion. Such an event, so far as it is produced by an agency that is spiritual and free, is supernatural, but not miraculous. In a miricle the will of God acts directly and produces outward effects with no intervening agency. This our wills cannot do. In a miricle the will of God acts directly and produces outward effects with no intervening agency. This our wills cannot do. Hence, a miracle is the great seal of God to any communication from Himself, and, so far as we can see, not the only possible evidence, far from it, but the only possible seal. There is in it, as there is in our control over nature, the agency of an intelligent will exercising dominion. This is the important element, and the only important element in both cases. The one is no more strange than the other, there is in it no more any violation of a law of nature, but the mode is such as to show that it can be done by God only. What difficulty, then, is there here? I see none, unless we deny the power of God to act directly on matter, and to do that would be a practical denial of his existence."

Such is Theosophy, which might be called the science of soaring after the infinite, diving after the unfathomable, and the pursuit of the Whereness of

Alleged Indian Trouble

A dispatch from Albuquerque Friday announced a row between Navajo and Zuni Indians at Defiance, N. M. Old Manuelito, who disarmed some waylaid and badly beaten by them, was the long-time head chief of all the many clans of the Navajo Nation, which count 20,000 souls. He is now about 90 years old, but still a superb specimen of trunk of a giant oak. Three or four years ago, on account of advancing age, e turned the reins of government over to Tootsonahostene, whose Mexican nickname is Ganadomuncho, "With Many Herds." The Navajo country is about forty-five miles from the venerable pueblo of Zuni, whose inhabitants are out a few hundred. The Zunis are no match, of course, for the Navajos in point of number; and scarcely more so in warlike prowess. They are of the old Aztec blood. and not really Indians at all. They dwell in a city of comfortable adol houses, farm extensively and have great herds. The Navajos, on the contrary, are true Indians, essentially nomadic, never willing to dwell in anything more substantial than brush and mud huts, famous hunters and warriors, and the wealthiest in cattle, horses and sheep of any savages in the world. The Zunis would not think of any aggression, but that the Navajos have killed three or four of them within a year or so; and they seem to have taken their grudge out on old Manuelito's tawny hide. Defiance is a lone trading-store to which both peoples repair.

The probability is, however, that the report-like nine out of ten from the Perritories—is grossly exaggerated, if not absolutely false. No further news has been received from the alleged seat of war, and none seems likely to be.

AMUSEMENTS.

CARLETON OPERA COMPANY -- Mr. Carle ton made so good an impression on his last visit here that he will undoubtedly be welcomed by a large house tomorrow night. During the week he will present, in addition to the favorite operas given during his last engagement, the opera of Fra Diavolo and The Drum Major's Daughter. In Erminic he does not have so good an opportunity to display his vocal talent, and he has theredisplay his vocal talent, and he has therefore introduced two extra songs, "Woman," Sweet Woman," by Alfred Cellier, and "Rosie Marie." The excellent average made by the company on its last appearance here, the gorgeousness of the costumes, good singing and acting, and, for our theater, inne stage mounting, were a matter of common praise, and will readily attract the numerous patrons of light opera during the week.

CO-OPERATIVE COLONY.

The Meeting Last Evening-Nothing The meeting of the stockholders of the California Cooperative Colony was called to order last evening, at about 8 o'clock, by President Ralph E. Hoyt, in I. O. G. T. Hoyt said that he thought the crisis had come in the affairs of the colony and he hoped that members would proceed to the business of the evening, calmly and coolly, without suspleion, and for the best interests of all concerned. He then stated that the colony had a written proposition from Bixby Bros. for the sale of 7000 acres of their Cerritos ranch to the colony. The proposition was to bond the land to the colony for ninety days, and if it was decided to purchase, the price would be $40 per acre, payable in three equal payments at six months, one and two years. The board of directors at a meeting held on Thursday had decided to recommend the acceptance of the offer, and this meeting was called to vote upon that point. Afterward, at the suggestion of Mr. Robson, the word present was substituted for recommend. O. H. Violet, being called upon, gave quite a lengthy description of the property, which lies about two miles west of Compton, bounded on the south by the lands of the American Colony and on the north by the Downey ranch, twelve to sixteen miles from Los Angeles. It is nearly level and produces large crops of alfalfa. One-half is first-class land, one-quarter fair average, and one-quarter second-class land. Col. Violet said that, though at the last meeting he was not in favor of this tract, because he thought that something better might be had, he had now changed his mind, as several other hoped-for propositions had failed, and he was in favor of accepting this proposition. He made quite a speech in support of his position. A long discussion followed. In which Messrs. Violet, Hawkins, Walton, Ross and Brock urged acceptance, and Messrs. Robson, Ready, Atwater and Walton urged rejection of the proposal. When the question came to a vote, a quorum was not present, and nothing could be done but to adjourn, which was accordingly done. A large majority of those present, however, favored the Cerritos site, and it will probably be accepted. hoped that members would proceed to the business of the evening, calmly and coolly,

The Famous Hotel Del Monte Burned.

Fire Breaks Out at Midnight and Spreads with Terrible Rapidity.

The Guests Barely Escape with Their Lives from the Doomed Palace.

All Efforts to Check the Planes in Valn-Th and Incidents During the Conflagration.

By Telegraph to The Times.

MONTEREY, April 2.—[By the Associated Press.] The Hotel del Monte was burned to the ground last night. Fire was discovered about 11 p.m. under the basement in the battery-room. The building had waterpipes all through it, arranged in such a manner that in case of fire the building could be flooded from top to bottom. No sooner was the fire discovered than the water was turned on, but all efforts to save the building were in vain. The alarm was given in town as soon as the fire was discovered, and ten minutes afterward the Monterey fire department was on the premises and had two streams on the building. The water pressure was poor and at times feet. The firemen worked hard. Seral times they were driven back the flames and had to retreat.

real times they were driven back by the flames and had to retreat.

FIRST DISCOVERY OF THE FIRE.

The fire was first discovered by J. C. Marshall, of Philadelphia. The clerk was quickly informed of the fact. He called up a number of servants, who, thinking they could check the fire without much trouble, and fearing that a panic might be caused by a sudden alarm, went to work to extinguish the flames without rousing the guests. There was foo building in the world better provided with the means of extinguishing a fire than was the Hotel del Monte. Hose was placed in every coridor. Fire extinguishers were in every hallway, and a magnificent system of water works, built by the company at a cost of over $500,000, was capable of throwing a stream to a height of a hundred feet. Besides this, nearly $20,000 had been expended on water appliances within the building, until, as was believed, nothing had been left undone to secure both building and guests from loss or accident by fire. In order to secure an ample supply of water, Charles Crocker, three years ago, purchased the ranch which includes Carmelo River, and erected an immense reservoir and mains at a cost of $400,000. The force of water was so great that if a full head were turned on it would have torn down an ordinary-sized building. The clerk and his assistants turned on the water, when they were horrified to find that the force was so weak as barely to give forth a sprinkle. They rushed to turn on additional streams, with similar result, showing clearly, as was afterward more fully realized, that the water works had been tampered with. The hallways began to fill with smoke, and employés of the house found that the fire was spreading, though they could not locate it. It soon became evident that they could not control the flames, and an alarm was given, the servants rushing through the halls and calling on the guests to get up and

Men, women and children dashed from their rooms clad only in their night clothes and such wraps as they could snatch from the beds. A few halted to secure their jewels and money, but the black smoke came rolling along the halls and warned them to waste no time in getting out of the building. Down the broad stairways rushed the frightened guests, only to be confronted with a heavy volume of smoke and a burst of fiame on the lower floor. They had to dash through smoke and flame to find a place of safety. Many ladies could not summon up courage enough to face the ordeal and fled shricking to the windows of the floor above, where their

CRIES FOR HELP almost drove their friends frantic. In the eantime the hook and ladder compan nnected with the hotel was at work, an adders were run up to the second and third stories, down which the servants carried the women and children, who were afraid to face the smoke and flames on the lower floor. The clerk, who was first notified of the fire, made strenuous efforts with his brigade to put out the flames, but the water could not be got. Manager Schoenwald, who only resumed charge yesterday, seeing that the hotel could not be saved, gave orders that all hands devote themselves to saving as much of the furniture and clothing as possible. Soon the servants be gait to throw from the windows beds and bedding, and such articles as would not be

THE HORROR OF THE NIGHT was made worse by the pitchy darkness, for soon after the fire broke out the gas main was made worse by the pitchy darkness, for soon after the fire broke out the gas main burst, and the hotel was plunged in gloom. The frightened guests huddled together on the lawn and beneath the shelter of trees. The bowling-alley and saloon, which are about 100 yards from the hotel, were given up to the use of the ladies and children, and all mattresses and bedding that were saved were placed there for their use. Most of the luggage of the guests was in the annex. That was the last part of the building to catch fire, and nearly all of that was saved, but most of the luggage in the main building was lost. Nearly all things in the safe were saved, and all kinds of bric-à-brac and valuables were seattered about on the lawn. The male guests worked hard to save what they could, but the heat soon became so intense that they were driven away from the building. There was no wind blowing, or the bowling-alley and stables would have caught. In less than half an hour the huge building was enveloped in flames, and within three hours was totally consumed, the only vestige remaining being the brick chimneys. The total loss, including the losses of guests, will probably reach $1,500,000. The only guest who was at all injured was Capt. Scott, a Boston capitalist, who burned his hands in too rapid descent on a rope from the window of the room he occupied. PROBABLY AN INCENDIARY'S WORK.

From the fact that the waterpipes been tampered with, and that immedia after the first outbreak of fire flames we noticed in another part of the building, it is firmly believed that it was the work of an incendiary. The matter will be strictly investigated.

TO BE REBUILT. To be Rebuilt.

A majority of the ladies were wrapped in blankets, with veils and scarfs about their heads and slippers on their feet. Those guests who had lost all their money by the fire were notified today by the manager of the Palace Hotel that they might draw op him for such funds as were necessary to provide them with proper clothing, and this evening they are feeling more comfortable. The blue-coated auditors scarcely breathed. With eyes strained hard and teeth elenched, they stood motionless and slient as stones. When the chief ceased, the order to break rank was unheeded. For a moment not a man stirred. Regardless of the imperative rule requiring them to at once go to their beats, the stalwart men in blue crowded around the speaker exclaiming "We will. That's right. It is against anarchy and agitation." He gave each of the men a warm word, or an encouraging look, as they hurriedly withdrew to their duty.

MAKING A BARGAIN WITH HARRISON.

C. G. Dixon, United Labor member of the State Legislature, called on Mayor Harrison this afternoon, and remained locked up with him for half an hour. The object of his visit was to induce Mayor Harrison to come out stilf more openly for the United Labor ticket, and make an unqualified formal announcement that he would support Nelson. Dixon said that if the Mayor would make such declaration. Nelson, if elected, would agree not to dismiss the present heads of the police and fire departments and the City C. mptroller, or would fill those offices with any men Harrison might name. The only condition made was that Inspector of Police Bonfield should be discharged on account of the open hostility of the United Labor party to him. The Mayor would give no decided answer to the proposition. All he would say was: "Wouldn't it be a good thing for Chicago to follow that plan?" The Martha Washington Disaster on the Mississippi River.

CLEVELAND (O.), April 2.—[By the Associated Press.] The Leader will say tomorrow: The discovery of Kissane in sociated Press.] The Leader will say tomorrow: The discovery of Kissane in California as a rich, prosperous and reputable citizen and his supposed identification with the noted forger and criminal who was twice addeted in New York for forgery committed upon the Chemical Bank and sent to the penitentiary, has caused great public excitement in Cleveland. This is the man who is believed to have been one of the leaders in the great Martha Washington steamboat conspiracy at Cincinnati, a tragedy that was consummated upon the Mississippi River and by which that steamer was burned, with her cargo, and several lives destroyed, in 1853, and which at the time of the arrest and trial of the criminals engaged in the piot produced as much public excitement in Ohlo as was ever known to arise from a criminal prosecution.

THE CONSPIRACY.

The defendant Kissane and others were engaged as wholesale boot and shoe dealers

The defendant Kissane and others were engaged as wholesale boot and shoe dealers at Cincinnati. They purchased the steamer Martha Washington, loaded her apparently with a costly freight, had the cargo insured for a large sum and sent her down the Mississippi regularly consigned to their correspondents at New Orleans. The captain was one of the conspirators, and had charge of the whole plot and its execution, and the cargo, supposed to be composed of boxes of boots and shoes, leather, wool and other valuable merchandise, was made up of refuse material of no value, and the boxes so carefully fastened and marked to their owners were filled with wood, stones and rubbish of every character. At a certain time when the passengers and the crew were quietly sleeping, and at a moment when the action could be most safely committed, the captain was to fire the vessel in such a manner as to insure her destruction, and the conspirators were to collect the insurance upon the vessel and valuabla cargo as a total loss. Apparently everything succeeded as planned. The cargo was publicly and carefully placed on board and no suspicion excited as to its character or genuineness. The captain was well known, and the vessel sailed upon her voyage with her cargo richly insured.

THE VESSEL BURNED.

THE VESSEL BURNED.

At the certain time she took fire, The fire At the certain time she took fire. The fire spread with inconceivable rapidity. The crew and officers took to the boats, and most of the lives were saved. Nobody doubted that the terrible accident was one of those incidents inseparable from the dangers of navigation, and the captain and owners were sympathized with as sufferers who had met unmerited misfortune. In due time a schedule of losses was carefully prenared—and proof of the merchandise destroyed was laid before the underwriters, and, so far as human foresight could discover, there was no objection to the payment, and the crime of Kissane and his associates was about to be satisfactorily consummated.

At this time there lived in Cleveland a associates was about to be satisfactorily consummated.

At this time there lived in Cleveland a well-known citizen named Sidney Burton. He was of excellent character, well-liked by his neighbors, of considerable influence and a prominent business man. He had had quite intimate dealings with Kissane and his partners at Cincinnati and was on terms of friendship with them. The origin of his suspicion cannot be traced now, but on the trial he swore that at one time he overheard one of the partners in the conting-room cursing God Almighty because they heard nothing of the fate of the steamer. In any event, these people owed Burton money. It was not paid, and Burton, whose suspicions were keenly aronsed as to the character of these persons,

BEGAN TO INVESTIGATE the history of the lost steamer. He gave notice to the insurance companies of his belief in the fact that a great crime had been comtice to the insurance companies of his belief in the fact that a great crime had been committed, and with the patience and untiring diligence of a trained detective he began his work. As he progressed in making proof after proof that satisfied his own mind as to the nature of the fraud, he became almost a monomaniac on the subject. He abandoned his business at home and his family, and spent his own money eagerly and lavishly in pursuit of his ends, and at last his efforts were crowned with success. The insurance companies all refused to pay, and suits were instituted to compel them. Finally, all the conspirators were arrested and taken to Columbus fer a hearing before the United States Commissioner. United States District Attorney Morton, of Toledo, was assisted by Hon. Henry Stanberry in the prosecution, and the defendant's counsel covered a large number of the most eminent lawyers in Ohio, among them Noah H. Swayne and Thomas Ewing. The defendants went to Columbus, accompanied by their wives and relatives. They were a fine body of people, male and female, some twenty or thirty in number, and had plenty of money and considerable social influence, and excited the greatest interest among men of all classes. Burton gave his testimony, and the whole proof was carefully gone over. The result was the binding over of the prisoners to the United States Court, and soon after bills of indictment for

Were found against him. From the day defendants were bound over upon the testimony discovered by Burton, the latter never for a moment abandoned his pursuit of the case. He spent his money with absolute freedom, traveling miles by rail, steamer or horseback and on foot, looking up the testimony necessary to convict. The writer of this was present at the trial of the men before Justice McLean. The venerable Thomas Ewing and the able Col. Swayne were assisted by some of the most emiment lawyers of the Cincinnati bar. The trial lasted for weeks. The testimony was overwhelming as to the prisoners' guilt. Proof of the character of the cargo, its worth and fraudulent insurance, was amply furnished, and few doubted that the gang would meet punishment. On the conclusion of Burton's testimony, which upon all important points had been clear and strightforward, but upon side issues was shaken by the cool, insolent, persistent and skillful cross-examination by Col. Swayne, the prosecution rested their case, and to the as-

There was no real defense and both Ewing and Swayne dared not allow Stanberry to have the closing argument to the Jury. United States Attorney Morton was unpresent of address the Jury, but he did the best he could upon the moment. The defense again "aubmitted their case to the court without argument." This stood off Stanberry and had the effect of placing the defendants wholly in the hands of the judges. Judge Mellean charged the jury so strongly that the jury presented a verdict of "not guilty," and this gang of criminals, the worst Ohlo had ever known, escaped conviction. Kissane was especially noted. Wholesome and somewhat attractive in person, a very fituent speaker, with a bland and innocent manner, very well dressed and always appearing like a gentleman and a refined person, he managed to gain largely the sympathy of the spectators. The verdict broke the heart of Mr. Burton. He seemed dazed by the shock and, his occupation gone, he returned to Cleveland bankrupt in fortune, having spent over 80,000 in pursuit of these rascals. His interest in life ceased, and not long after he died. His fate caused great sympathy at the time, and he was regarded with special interest. Some effort was made to relimburse him for the money expended, but the verdict of "not guilty" was conclusive with the Government, and for his long and wearisome trials and unselfish labors he received no reward. Soon after the trial the gang of scoundrels separated and left Cincinnati. They were

BEATING HIS RECORD

Harry Wilkes Trots a Mile in 2:13 1-1 at Bay District Track-Other Interesting Events on the Turf.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 2.- [By the Asso ciated Press.] An immense crowd wit-nessed Harry Wilkes's attempt to beat his record, 2:14%, for a purse of $2000, at Bay District track this afternoon. The track was fast, the weather perfect and the horse in first-rate fettle. All the conditions were favorable to the horse, but still the betting was in favor of time at the rate of 5 to 3 and 4 to 1. The odds were due to Wilkes appearing high in flesh. Van Ness only gave him five minutes' warming at a slow jog before scoring. He passed the wire twice before nodding for the word, when he went away at a moderate pace. Wilkes's wonderful strides deceived everybody. Few expected him to be successful. Rounding the turn at the first quarter in 34% seconds he straightened his back and commenced to move like a piece of machinery. He made the second quarter in 33, and the third, on the lower turn, in 34 seconds. The crowd commenced to cheer and then almost groaned as the gallant little horse made a slight bobble movement, so slight that only experts detected it, and in a flash Wilkes was himself again and moving the pace at a 2:09 gait. He weakened, but Van Ness's cheering "Hi-yah," straightened him out instantly, and he completed the last quarter in 334 seconds, or 2:134 for the mile. As he flashed under the wire wild cheers went up for several minutes. The audience was wild with delight, even heavy losers in the betting joining in the general rejoleing. An enthusiastic lady attempted to decorate the equine hero with a handsome floral collar, when Harry Wilkes displayed a fondness for flower diet and ate most of his tribute. The official time is undisputed, as hundreds of watches were held. It is the fastest mile ever trotted on the Bay District track; and the general opinion is that Wikes could pull two seconds off of it if pushed. He made it very easily, and is pronounced the best horse in America today.

In the pools he commanded 50 to 18 for the other two combined. Hilton won the first heat in a jog in 2:21½, Arab 2:22, and J. Q. was nearly distanced through a series of breaks. Arab won the next three straight heats and the race in 2:20½, 2:20½ and 2:23½. Arab was not pushed in either heat, both Charlle Hilton and J. Q destroying whatever chances their speed gave them by breaking badly. Whenever they came anywhere near Arab the slightest effort on his part was sufficient to carry them off their feet.

Chinese in Honolulu Offer a Reward for Kalakaua's Read.

San Francisco, April 2.—[By the Associated Press.] Capt. McCullough, who arrived a few days ago in command of the brig William G. Irwin, from the Sandwich Islands, relates a remarkship a tory of Chilliands. Islands, relates a remarkable story of Chineseenmity against King Kalakaua. He states that certain Chinese firms paid a bribe of $70,000 to a native officer holding a high position to secure his influence in obtaining the exclusive right to sell opium in the the exclusive right to sell opium in the Hawalian Kingdom, and that the Chinese firm in question failed to secure the prize. They then demanded the return of the bribe, which was refused. McCullough further states that the Chinese have decided not to submit to what they consider an outrage, and when he left the walls of Honolulu were covered with handbills in Chinese offering a reward of $5000 for the head of King Kalakaua. It is said that the guards have been doubled about the palace.

Great Loss of Life Reported Ame

Rescuing Boats Unable to Reach Her on Account of the Heavy Sea.

Disaster Occurs on the Massachus Coast, Near Scituate—Heager Reports, but Well-founded Fears of a Terrible Catastrophe.

By Telegraph to The Times.

Boston, April 2.—[By the Associated Press.] It is reported that the Cunard steamship Scythia has gone ashore in the breakers at Scituate, Mass. There are rumors of great loss of life.

Boston, April 2.-A report was received at the Cunard steamship office in this city at a late hour this morning that the steamer Scythia, of the Cunard line, had gone ashore in the breakers at Scituate, some six miles from Minet's Light, just before dusk to-night. It was also reported that at the time of the disaster a blinding snow-storm was prevailing, accompanied by a terrific gale, prevailing, accompanied by a terrine gale, and that the sea was simply wild with fury. The Scythia has over 800 persons on board, including passengers and crew, and rumors, which cannot be verified because telegraphic communication with that station is interrupted by storm, are current that there has been great loss of life.

UNABLE TO SEND RELIEF.

The wrecking companies have endeavored to send out tugs to the relief of the stranded ship, but the sea is so terrific that they could not live outside. They are now waiting for the sea to subside.

LATER.—There seems to be no doubt, from information at hand, that the Scythia disaster is a fact, but how seriously the accident is, can not be learned until boats can goout. It will be impossible to get details tonight, and the Associated Press reporter will go to the wreck on the first boat out.

Boston, April 2.—The reports of the disaster have been confirmed by the police-boat Proctor. A tug, with a relief crew and reporters on board, will leave for the scene of the wreck as soon as it is safe to venture Thrown from the Track.

AUBURN (N. Y.), April 2.—The overland passenger train No. 2, going west, was thrown from the track in a cut three miles thrown from the track in a cut three miles above Auburn this morning. The cause was a broken wheel on the engine. George Williams, of Newfoundland, a tramp, riding between the baggage and express cars, had his leg broken. Fireman Armstrong was thrown through the cab window and injured in the left hip and on the head. Two mail messengers were bruised and scratched. Engineer Cox was injured in the back, and his head was bruised. The railroad company sent Drs. Todd and Rooney to attend to the injured. The mail and express cars were badly wrecked. The baggage car was also wrecked. The sleepers and coaches were uninjured. The passengers were hardly aware of the accident. The wreck is being rapidly cleared.

Another Report About Manning. New York, April 2.—Sub-Treasurer Canda, of this city, cabled to ex-Treasurer Jordan at London yesterday, asking him it the reports regarding ex-Secretary Manning's illness were correct. Canda has received the following reply:

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT FOR ITS RELIEF.

ddress to the People of California by the Bar of San Francisco— Cogent Reasons in Favor of the

The following important address, which was made the subject of an Associated Press dispatch in yesterday's Trares, gives the legal view of the constitutional amendments that are soon to be voted upon:

San Francisco, March 30, 1887.—To the People of the State of California: The Bar Association of San Francisco respectfully invites attention to the constitutional amendments to be submitted to the people on the 12th of April next. They are designed to extricate the court of last resort from its present difficulties, and to obtain for the citizen what is so important, viz., speedy justice.

The delays that have unfortunately occurred in the administration of justice are familiar to all, but few outside of the legal profession are aware of the difficulties which surround the situation.

At the organization of the present court, under the Constitution of 1879, there were pending and undisposed of 604 cases. Since then there have come in 4858 new cases, making an average of 604 cases since then there have list organization, has disposed of 4555 cases, making an average of 600 cases per annum. It is not reasonable to suppose that the number of incoming cases will decrease as the State increases in population and prosperity. It is plain, therefore, that unless something is done to enable the court to get rid of its burden, the present state of things must continue for an indefinite period.

More than has been accomplished under the existing organization cannot be ex-enable the court to get rid or its burden, the present state of things must continue for an indefinite period.

More than has been accomplished under the existing organization cannot be expected. The present court is a hard-working one, and gets through with as much work as it is possible to do. An examination of the reports of the Supreme Court of the United States, which has nine judges, shows that in the five years preceding 1886, that court decided 1520 cases, making an average of 304 cases per annum, less than half the average number decided by our own court.

The reports of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, which has seven judges, show that in the five years preceding 1886 that tribunal decided 2525 cases, making an average of 504 cases per annum, which is less than the average of our own court by 146.

which is less than the average of our own count by 146.

The reports of the highest court of Pennsylvania, a court with seven judges, show that in the five years preceding 1885 that tribunal decided 1826 cases, making an average of 365, which is less than the average of our own court by 285 cases per annum.

age of our own court by 285 cases per annum.

The reports of the highest court of Massachusetts, a court with seven judges, show that in the five years preceding 1886 that tribunal decided 1739 cases, making an average of our own court by 303 cases per annum.

And it is believed that an examination of the reports of the other States will show like results, viz.: that our court decides more causes than any other.

But it may be asked, how it is, if such is the case, that such large and opulent Commonwealths get along—how comes it that the Supreme Court of California (a State which is conparatively small in point of population) has so much work to do?

There are several reasons for this, but the which is comparatively small in point of population) has so much work to do?

There are several reasons for this, but the chief among them is that our people have been extremely liberal with the right of appeal, and with their grants of original jurisdiction to appellate courts. In this state a case involving only $300 may be taken to the Supreme Court, as a matter of right—not to speak of vast numbers of cases not susceptible of pecuniary estimation. In the Supreme Court of the United States the jurisdictional amount is $500, unless leave to appeal is granted by the judge. But in New York there is a system of intermediate appellate tribunals, which stop a large number of the cases; and the Court of Appeals is purely an appellate tribunal, and has no power to issue original writs, except tribunals, which stop a large number of the cases; and the Court of Appeals is purely an appellate tribunal, and has no power to issue original writs, except in aid of its appellate jurisdiction. It may be added that the Supreme Court of the United States is now several years behind with its work, and the subject of relieving it from its difficulties is occupying the attention of Congress and the country; and that within the last ten years the people of New York have had to adopt the same measure that is proposed here, viz., to give the court ac commission of appeals to help it clear off its arrears. The same thing has been done in inclana, Tennessee, Texas and Ohio.

An idea of the enormous labor imposed upon our Supreme Court may be gained from the following considerations: There are in California sixty-nine Superior Courts constantly engaged in deciding causes which may be, and which, as a matter of fact, nearly always are, taken to the Supreme Court. In the first place, there is a hearing in the department. Then there is the petition for a hearing in bank, and this is granted, there is a hearing in bank, and the petition for a hearing in bank, and if this is granted, there is a hearing in bank, and sometimes the court in bank is assalled with a petition for rehearing. Since its organization, the present court has passed upon 1060 petitions for rehearing.

To the appeals must be added the original proceedings in the Supreme Court, such as applications for writs of mandamus, certiforari and prohibition. Of these the court has had before it, since its organization in 1880, 414, nearly every one of which involved the hearing of demurrers, motions in relation to pleadings, motions for new trial, etc. And in all cases, whether of original or appellate jurisdiction, the Constitution requires that the decision shall be given in writing, and that the grounds thereof shall be stated.

In view of this enormous mass of work is quires that the decision shall be given in writing, and that the grounds thereof shall be stated.

In view of this enormous mass of work it is impossible for the court, under the present system, to keep even with its accumulating business, much less to clear off its arrears. It is overworked now. The press of business is such that it cannot give sufficient consideration to the cases presented for decision.

So much for the evil which exists. Let us now see what is the remedy proposed. In the first place, it is proposed to increase, temporarily, the working force. The commission as created by the act of the Legislature has no power to create a court. All that the commission, as at present organized, can do is to "assist" the court by preparing opinions for its consideration. Such opinions have no force until adopted by the court. And the justices inform us that they deem it their duty not to adopt such opinions, without going over them carefully; and experience has shown that it takes almost as much time to examine such opinions, in connection with the record, as to decide the case in the first instance. To obviate this the amendments propose to erect the commission into a temporary department of the court, empowering it to hear and decide causes just as a department of the court in bank for rehearing as there is in the case of a decision by a department of the court.

Another important change designed to expedite business, is in the manner of selection of the Chief Justice. The efficiency of the court largely depends upon his officer. Under the constitution, he is not only to assist in the decision of causes, but is to prescribe the order of business. Everything depends upon his being a good presiding officer. A man may be a sound lawyer and a good judge without having the qualities meessary to guide the deliberations of the justices, so as to insure the dispatch of business. He should not only possess high legal attainments, but be gifted with administrative ability of a superior order. In the means of Linewing whether and processors who can know about this matter are the justices themselves. They, rome daily expected the process of the post of the process of the post of the process of the post of th present rate except in Tulare and Monterey, in which the salary is fixed at $4000 per annum.

This we submit is a step in the right direction. The function of a decision, under our system, is not merely to dispose of the particutar case, but also to furnish a rule for other cases. A great body of the law is made in this manner. And to make such rules harmonious and adapted to the needs of society is most delicate and difficult work, calling for a high degree of skill and judgment. Now experience in every walk of life teaches that a high degree of skill cannot be obtained at the lowest compensation. Lawyers, like other people, seek the most advantageous market for what they have to offer. If sufficient inducement is not offered to them on the bench the best lawyers will not go there. There are doubtless eminent exceptions to this, but in the long run it will be found to be true. The consequence of such a state of things is an inferior body of law: inharmonious and conflicting decisions and uncertain rules. It is very poor economy to bring about such a condition of affairs to effect, what to the State is a pitiful saving.

There are some matters in the amend-

State is a pitiful saving.

There are some matters in the aments of which space does not perm discussion.

In conclusion, it is submitted that nothing as he more important than speedy justice.

Delay defeats in many cases the purposes for which courts are established. It enables the dishonest man to use the law to screen himself from justice, and puts it in the power of the rich to oppress the poor, who machinery of the courts can afford him relief. Of scarcely less importance is it to have a sound body of harmonious rules adapted to the needs of society, and under which business can be carried on without unnecessary friction.

ORANGE SHIPMENTS.

Big Specials East-The Cold-storage

The California Southern Railroad sent of two big special trains of oranges last night to the East, over the Santa Fé route. One was its regular Saturday night special, and consisted of sixteen cars.

The Earl Fruit Company, which recently ceeded to the large fruit business of Edwin T. Earl, shipped an entire train of oranges, consisting of fifteen cars, to the oranges, consisting of fifteen cars, to the East yesterday. This train is drawn by a special engine, chartered by the Earl Fruit Company for the purpose. The train will make fast time—nearly equal to passenger trains—to the Missouri River. The train goes East via the Santa Fé route. This is the first train of fruit ever sent East by one firm from California. The Earl Fruit Company will send East one or two trains each week during the remainder of the orange season. This firm also handles summer fruits on a large scale at Sacramento, San José and other points in Northern California.

SUCCESSFUL COLD STORAGE.

The two following letters speak for themselves:

ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC RAILROAD CO., Boston, March 24, 1887.

Charles F. Pierce, Esq., Manaher Tiffany Refrigerator Car Company, Chicago, Ill. Dear Sir: I received last week two boxes of oranges which were consigned to me by Twogood & Edwards, of Riverside, Cal. These oranges came to Chicago in a Tiffany refrigerator car, and were there reshipped by express, and were sixteen days on the road; but they came to hand as fresh and in as fine condition as when they were shipped from Riverside. Such shipments speak volumes in favor of your cold-storage process and of its adaptability for the carriage of fruit and other articles requiring careful transportation through extremes of heat and cold, and I take pleasure in testifying to the perfect success of your cars as a means of hauling

(PARASITES MAGNIFIED 480 TIMES.)

Our treatment consists in using remedies in the form of an ointment, which is sprayed through the head and throat, reaching every part that a spray can reach. The remedy remains in the head for some time, passes steadily into vapor, and reaches cells filled with mucous impossible to be reached by medicine in liquid or powdered form.

The treatment is painless, pleasant and effectual, ouring fully 80 per cent of cases.

1300 LOTS.

PRICES OF LOTS:

Up to 100 ft. Front, $150; Half-acre Lots, $200; From 1-2 to 1 Acre, $300; From 1 to 4 Acres, $400; 5-acre Lots, $750.

TERMS One-fifth cash, balance in eight equal monthly payments, without interest. These prices will continue only until June 1, 1887, when they will positively be advanced. All who purchase before that date will have the benefit of the advanced prices.

The entire tract is beautifully situated, with a charming view, pure air and water and perfect drainage. The Ostrich Farm Dummy Railroad runs through the tract, with a five-cent fare guaranteed to and from the center of the city. This road will be completed to the tract July 1, 1887. Pure and abundant water will be piped thro' all the streets.

The title to the property is absolutely perfect. A complete abstract will be kept in the office of the company for the inspection of all purchasers, and a certificate of title will be furnished to each buyer with his deed.

This tract is situated upon the hills, which are rapidly becoming the most desirable residence portion of the city. The soil is a warm, sandy loam, free from frost, being in what is known as the warm belt. The elevation is such that the temperature is more even than in the city.

NOTE-The first purchasers have first choice. Free carriage to the tract every day from the office of the agents, at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Maps and circulars and all information can be had from

CATARRH, ETC.

At times many of the symptoms of Catarrh may seem to abate, and the patient is led to hope that the disease is about to wear off; but snother class of symptoms soon appears, and he learns to his horror that instead of recovery from the disease, it is somewhat changed in its character and has extended to the throat. A sense of weariness is sometimes felt in reading, speaking er singing, hoarseness at times occurs, a sensation of dryness is felt in the "throat, or it appears that some foreign substance, as, for instance, a hair, obstructed the throat, there becomes a sense of languor and fatigue, the breath lessens upon a little exertion, a short, hucking cough, a page at though the clearing the throat, a feeting as though the clearing the throat, a feeting the considerable progress. But this delusion is the grand error which has peopled our cemeteries with consumptive forms.

I have seen so many of these cases cured that I do not consider any case hopeless unless both lungs are seriously involved. Even then the inhalations aid us in dissolving the mucus and in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success.

It was late in the afternoon when the natives left the ship for their cances. They made a comical appearance as they clambered down the ship's side. All of the articles of clothing obtained on ship-board they had put on. The chief wore his silver watch suspended by a silken cord from his neck. The others were adorned with hat and handkerchiefs, and the native with the sailor's jacket walked away with the sailor's jacket walked away as proudly as if that were not his only

It did not take them long to tumble into their canoes. They went down chattering to each other in their native chattering to each other in their native tongue. They evidently were delighted with the bargains they had made. Swiftly the cances sped away over the water. The boys were all leaning over the ship's side, watching their departure. Captain Johns stood waving his hat in a friendly manner. The natives had shown him great kindness while he was with them, and he was not a man to forget it. The cances soon swept around the point of the island, and were hidden from sight. The golden afternoon sunlight shone upon the still water, and the coral groves could be seen a hundred feet below the surface. So clear was the sea that the ship, lying at anchor, looked as if it were suspended above the ocean bed, instead of lying upon the water.

the ocean bed, instead of lying upon the water.

"This is as handsome a garden as I ever saw," said Tom to the Captain, who stood near him, and, like.him, looking down into the sea.

"Yes," he replied, "the flower, like coral polyps, look marvelously like the roses, the daisies, the violets, and the lilies of our home gardens. See those wonderful tints of pink and pearl color, of blue, and orange, and purple, and green. And look at the many colored fishes, too, that dart in and out between the branching coral."

"What a splendid home for the mermaids," added George.

"We see the Creator's hand in these sea gardens, no less than upon the blossoming land," remarked the Captain.

tain.

An awning had been stretched above the deck to the fore part of the ship, and here they all adjourned to spend the remaining hours of the afternoon. The Captain was a good story-teller; had visited almost every country in the world, and, as Tom declared, was a most welcome addition to their number.

world, and, as Tom declared, was a most welcome addition to their number.

Tom had already showed him all over his yacht, and he was pleased with all he had seen. The cabin was a model one, fitted up with all the conveniences that could be crowded into it. The staterooms were elegant and comfortable. The room that Tom had occupied was larger than the others and was just abaft of the cabin, to one side of the gangway, where the stairs were placed leading up on deck. It had small, square windows, a handsome single bed, some fine pictures upon the walls, a heavy brussels carpet on the floor, and two great easy chairs. Tom's sea-chest was there, too, and a beautifully-finished mahogany washstand was built into its side; a barometer with a fine case hung just above the table, on which were some books belonging to our young "professors," George and Will. It was as pleasant a room as could be found on any ship, even of much larger size.

Tom insisted that the Captain should take this room, and he would go into one of the staterooms opening off the cabin. Captain Johns objected to this, but Tom urged the matter so earnestly that he felt that it would be a disappointment to the boy if he refused it so he finally accepted Tom's offer.

The staterooms, though small, had each two comfortable berths, with curtains of bright silk stuff, a stationary upholstered seat, between the wash-stand and berths; hanging shelves for books, a little round camp-stool, and on the floor a carpet of gay pattern which made the pretty, closet-like rooms look anyhow.

The afternoon found them, as I said, all on deck under the awning, after the islanders had left. José was seen throwing a big package overboard.

"What's up now, José?" inquired

"What's up now, José?" inquired Tom.
"Nothing's up; but my cigarettes are down pretty effectually, I guess," laughed José.
"You don't mean to say that you've thrown all your cigarettes adrift, do you?" James Hyde inquired, with a look of astonishment.
"Yes, I mean just that," replied José. "I've been ashamed of this filthy habit of smoking ever since I've been among you clean-mouthed boys, and I'm resolved to put all temptation out of the way."

and I'm resolved to put all temptation out of the way."

"Three cheers for José!" cried George, rising and swinging his cap. They were lustily given, the captain joining in with hearty approval.

"My young friend," said he, taking José's hand, as the noise of the cheering died away, "you've taken a right manly step this afternoon. It has cost you some effort, I know. I think that you are of the stuff that good men are made of. Smoking is a bad habit, my hoy. It often leads to worse vices, and I am glad to see that you are resolved to give it up. Always be as firm in resisting whatever you think is wrong and I shall have no fears for your future."

"Thank you, sir," replied José. He could not say more, for he felt a great lump in his throat, and so went a little to one side for a moment. But his eyes shone brightly and there was a look of determination on his face that was pleasant to see.

After dinner all gathered on deck night was still. There was not even the lap of a wave against the ship. Occasionally the sound of some night birds cry came across from the shore. That was almost the only sound heard. Jose swung lazily in a hammock that had been stretched for his accommodation. It was his smoking hour and he missed it. He had an uneasy sensation—a sense of longing that was like hunger. It made him uncomfortable. "Time I stopped," he muttered, "if it makes me feel like this to do without my cigarette. I'm as bad as an old toper longing for his grog I'll fight it out, though. I don't know how easy it would be for me if I could put my hand on a cigar. Glad I can't, anyhow."

"Captain, did you ever go gorillahunting?" inquired Tom.

"Yes; only once, though. It was in the heart of equatorial Africa. You know that is the home of the gorilla."

"Will you tell us about it?" asked Will.

"Cartainly if you'd like to hear. I

Will.

"Certainly, if you'd like to hear. I was traveling through Central Africa some years ago. It was in a region of magnificent forests, great rivers and big serpents. By the way, the natives of Africa eat these large and venomous serpents, and consider them a great delicacy. I had stopped over night in a village of little native huts. My breakfast had consisted of some dried herring and a ship biscuit. The natives meanwhile had enjoyed the delicacy of roast monkey and a few bitter nuts. I had wandered out a short distance from the village when I came across some fresh gorilla tracks. This excited me a good deal, for I never had been on a gorilla hunt. They are ugly things to fight, the fiercest of all the animals in African forests. Even lions and tigers disappear before them. They are strong, active and very bold.

"I selected a half a dozen natives to go with me, and took care to have them all well armed. In addition to my gun I had a big Colt's revolver in my belt. We could easily track the gorilla, for it had rained the day before, and the ground was soft. We made sure that all of our guns were well loaded, for we knew that the gorilla would not give us time to load, and if once attacked by him without any means of defense our lives would not be worth anything, for he is a terrible fighter. I should rather face a lion, or a tiger maimed than a male gorilla.

"We went our way cautiously, never speaking a word and taking care to make as little noise as possible. We kept near together, for we knew that one man would be no match for this terrible creature. The natives showed signs of fear, and I did not blame them. I was a good deal more excited myself than I would have been on a lion or tiger hunt, for I knew that the danger was greater. But we pushed on, sometimes through dense jungles and across a wift streams, over fallen logs and past great rocks. We had gone a long distance, and the footprints of the gerilla showed very plain and looked as if only just made. We came across a place where he had sat dow if I was going to murder something that had a soul. But he came nearer, filling the forest with his roar. 'Courage, my men!' said I. 'Now, take steady aim, and fire.' He was pounding himself with his huge, hand-like paws, and bellowing with rage. But just as he was ready to advance upon us again, we fired and killed him. He fell with an awful cry that made me shudder. He lay writhing and moaning for a few moments on the ground, and then he was dead.

Success. Money is good, but a large, loving home companionship is better; even if accompanied by limited capital.

Men of business, test my assertion and see if I am not right.

"I was quite proud of our success, and the natives danced about, perfectly wild in their glee. It was not long before they had the creature cut up, and as we had no other food they made a supper of his flesh. It is a sad thing when a man of It is a said thing when a man of family is so wrapped up in his business that he gives all his time and thoughts to it, cutting himself off from all the social and domestic enjoyment of his home. He may think that he is doing the best thing for his family in thus striving to accumulate for them, but there are many things in this life that bring greater enjoyment than riches. bring greater enjoyment than riches. Many a business man is almost a stranger to his family. He comes home to his meals, it is true, but in a sort of preoccupied way, too tired for much conversation, too much engrossed by business interests to have much thought business interests to have much thought for anything outside, or any really full and sweet intercourse with wife and children. He may tell his wife, perhaps, that he has invested so much in real estate today, and sit down and calculate with her what the probable advance on his investment may be in the course of a year or so. He may tell her that he is thinking of some additional purchase, and that he hopes his business interests will be worth ten, fifteen or even twenty thousand more at the end of a certain period than they are now, but beyond that he hasn't much to say. He is always kind to his wife, O'yes! He would not say anything for the world that would wound her, and he furnishes all the money that she needs for herself and the children. What more can she ask for? Why, my good man, there is one thing that she would prize a thousand fold more than all this, and that is your companionship. She would like your sympathy in what interests her. She does not like to keep all her best thoughts, her best utterances for strangers. She would give more for one everling of the old lover-like days' when you entered into all her hopes and aspirations, when you had little glimpses of each other's soul life, than she would for all the thousands that you are bending your whole energies to accumulate. If her intellectual nature is hungry, if she is longing for that companionship that stimulates mental action, do you think that she is happy if she must go outside her home for what she seeks, when she knows that you might give it to her if you would? Happiness is to her something more than raiment—more than the purple and fine linen with which you would clothe her. This waiting for the good time coming is all a mistake. There is no time like the present. It is all that we are sure of. We should make the most of it. We should endeavor to get the greatest possible enjoyment out of every day as it passes.

I was a little in advance of my men when, near the broad trunk of a tree, I caught sight of the gorilla. The beast saw me about the same moment, though I was creeping forward very cautiously. As he did so he uttered one of his loud roars, which sounded like distant thunder. His eyes flashed as if full of lightning, and his forehead twitched and wrinkled. He opened his mouth and showed his savage teeth, which were long and sharp enough to crush us with a single effort. As he stood upright he looked like a hairy giant. He took a few steps toward us, then stopped to roar at us again, and he pounded his breast and giared at us with his angry eyes.

I am an English woman, and know how many thousands of clever, sensible women in my own country would gladly supply the demand if the expenses of transit were not so great. I should like to know if there is any emigration society in existence that would help to adjust this question of demand and supply. There are a vast number of mothers helps, farmers' daughters, and nursery governesses, who do more than is demanded from domestic servants, belgs, farmers' daughters, and nursery governesses, who do more than is demanded from domestic servants, for women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the water of the women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the women's labor in the women's labor in the few avenues of women's labor in the women's lab into this glorious State, where all the conditions of life seem to be perfect so the overstocked labor market in Britain and be an unspeakable blessing here. I write this letter in the hope of evoking interest in this great social problem. My heart is stirred by the needs of women on both sides of the globe, and I wish that the press may ventilate the subject, and that a few philanthropists would establish an employment bureau, where the women could be cared for on landing and helped into families where they are so greatly needed. I am, sir, faithfully yours,

Are the Gospel Floods Covering the Earth?—The Outlook for 1887.

[Extracts from an article by Arthur T. Pierson] God has a plan in regard to the evangelization of this world, and that plan is revealed. We ought to have it so clearly stamped upon our minds that no doubt should ever arise as to the fact, the destiny of the gospel, or our duty. That plan of God is unfolded in prophecy in unmistakable terms and Where can you find mankind sunk in deeper mental and moral degradation than in Australia and adjacent islands, whose savages are but one grade higher than the brutes they hunt and kill? Behold the Papuan, and Maori, and other tribes, equally lost to humanity, like the coin whose original image and superscription are worn off, restored to humanity and to God, and worn as precious and burnished pieces of silver on the necklace of Christ's bride!

Polynesia has been the scene of gospel triumphs which for character, number and rapidity scarce admit comparison. Wherever the gospel touches these islands it transforms their civil and social life with a speed that leaves us no doubt of the wonder-working power of God. Polynesia only a little while ago was the earthly realization of hell. To be cast on these shores meant robbery, torture, death, and then a cannibal feast over your flesh. Today you would be tenderly cared for as on the most hospitable shores, and would find over 800 churches of Christ in those islands. Thomas Powell placed on the little island of Nanumaga a native evangelist. He found the island full of idols of stone and wood; altars in every house, and temples almost as maay as dwellings. Eight years afterward one-third of the entire population were members of the Christian church, and two-thirds of the children were in Christian schools, and those new church members contributed to the support of the gospel and its extension $1.60 each, average. Not an idol is now to be found, nor an idol temple, and the people, all clothed decently, sit with delight to listen to the gospel.

The number of converts in Madagascar during a period of thirty-five years of missionary labor is computed to "exceed the number of converts in the Roman Empire during the first three centuries of the Christian era."

THEOSOPHY.

THE NEW RELIGION INVENTED BY, MME. BLAVATSKY.

ings After the Infinite and Divings After the Unfathomable. The True Inwardness of the "Science of the Spiritual."

[Paper read before the Woman's Club by Miss Louise A. Off.] We are all familiar with the adage. There is nothing new under the sun,' ret there are points in the cyclic evolu-tion of a world when nature, physical, mental and moral, seems to transform herself, and men appear to enter new relations and new conditions. Physical nature has presented these transfigura tions at such climaxes as the discovery of the world's sphericity afforded, or of the world's sphericity afforded, or that of the telescope, the spectroscope, the power of steam. of electricity, and the innumerable other material agencies by which nature put on a greater fullness, a more complete and perfect garment. The periods of mental or intellectual transformation are as numerous as the thinking centers of the world. Every mathematician and scientist who has taken cognizance of a law governing the external world, and demonstrated the same to the realm of the intellect, has established what appear to be new relationships. It is evident that neither of these great departments have created any what appear to be new relationships. It is evident that neither of these great departments have created anything new, but merely demonstrated on the objective plane what has eternally existed in the subjective condition. Electricity was not non-existent because it had not been discovered, nor were the laws governing electricity uncreate, because no mind had been clear enough to grasp them—and the same holds good with the moral department.

Buddha, Confucius, Zoroaster, Socrates, Plato and Christ taught ethic laws which appeared to put men on an entirely new footing in relation to themselves and to their fellowmen, when, in fact, it was but a period of renewed action in the higher nature of man, arousing the inherent but dormant spirit. This, and nothing more, is claimed for theosophy or the science of the spiritual—that it is a moral philosophy for which a great active mant spirit. This, and nothing more, is claimed for theosophy or the science of the spiritual—that it is a moral philosophy for which a great active period has arrived, a period of practical realization, and instead of its confinement as in the past ages of darkness and ignorance to the few transcending and powerful souls, to the few broad and sympathetic hearts, it is now undergoing a general diffusion among the human race, and destined to become the practical and universal enlightenment of the mind which Buddha and Christ were so eager to infuse into their own time, and for which they planted such rich and indestructible seed. To all but the most superficial reader and thinker it must be a clear rand incontrovertible fact that we now stand upon the threshhold of this metaphysical era, in which thought and research penetrate into the supersensual world. Science finds its complement and art its inspiration in the occult realm. The true leaders of science acknowledge that the physical is not complete without the psychical nature, and that in order to better comprehend the laws of matter they must become familiar with the laws governing soul—these two being interdependent. The existence of the dual forces in nature and in man has been evident to all philosophers, and the science treating of the relations of these is the science of life, and leads to the knowlege of self, or to theosophy. Some of the distinguished authorities and chief of European scientists who have aided in raising the soul-science out of its legendary domain to which modern materialism had condemned it to its proper elevation of scientific research are: Prof. Zollner, author of Physical Dynamics, and professor of Astronomy and Physics in the University of Leipzig; Prof. Crookes, F.R.S.; Baron von Reichenbach, the famous discoverer of Od, or the physical measurement of psychical force; Draper, the author of an exhaustive work on electro-dynamics, of whom it is said "no scientific repatation stands higher in Germany than that of Weber"; N. The tables at atternoon teas are now in the best taste, and a little effort is made to offer the things that will not spoil one's appetite for the soup and prosaic things of the dinner that come prosaic things of the dinner that come so closely on its heels. Tea and chocolate, and occasionally bouillon, are offered, and thin pate de foie gras sandwiches are now the fancy of the moment. In some places punch is tabooed, as not being sanctioned by London example; but, just now, every one offers cafe glace, otherwise, coffee ice cream, but served in punch cups. The cafe glace is always put on the table, either in a large salad bowl or a punchbowl, and is served with a ladle, whereby many are deluded, and fail to recognize their old friend—plain coffee ice cream.
